Double-Header From League Leaders.

-4 ALL KINDS OF BASEBAL

M'CLOSKEY BREAKS INTO TH GAME HARD.

The shades of night were falling fast, when through the ball ground gates there passed, some thousands which, though short on ice, had seen our boys beat John's boys twice. The only merit claimed for the above epic is that it tells the strict truth. Strange though it may appear to the brethren of the fan genus who were not on hand, the tail enders actually beat the leaders two times in rapid succession. The first game went 11 innings and the score was 8-7. The second game was of the usual length. The score was 14-12. Therefore let us rejoice with an exceeding great joy.

We are not pretending to try to con ceal out hilarious emotion. All joi hands and sweetly we will sing, "Ther Was a Hot John in the Old Town Las Night." Really we ought to have much time and as much space as the e teemed Noah Webster expended on h justly celebrated unabridged to fitting ly set forth all that happened down of the pasture yesterday afternoon. If ex istence were measured by events in stead of by minutes, hours, days an years, the 1,500 people who saw yester day's contests would be 20 years olde today than they were yesterday.

Five hours of baseball, to be exact four hours and fifty minutes, for ther was an intermission of ten minutes be tween the games, are enough to su the most exacting. Crowd into these five hours all kinds of hitting, all kinds of errors, all kinds of fast, heady baseball, and add to these the fact that we won twice, two times, count 'em, two, and you suit not only the most exacting, but the most captious, the most peevish, the most querulous. You get an idea of the sort of games they were from the fact that nobody went home until the last man had been put out in the last inning of the last game.

Many Interesting Features.

The features were too numerous to mention. One of them was Honest John McCloskey. John broke into the game first in the tenth inning of the opening encounter. He didn't have a chance either at the bat or in the field. Therefore he played foultlessly. In the first fore he played faultlessly. In the first game McCloskey took Hammond's place after Hammond had been saucy to the umpire, a sauciness that resulted in rollers for Mr. Hammond. In the second game O'Connell became ill in the third inning. Marshall was brought in from right to play second and John sauntered out to Marshall's place. He fielded his position perfectly having no sauntered out to Marshall's place. He fielded his position perfectly, having no chances. And what do you think he did at the bat? Oh, nothing to speak of, only three safe hits and two runs out of three times up. Of course a younger player would have gotten six or eight hits in three times at bat but John did fairly well for an old-never-away without damage in the first. In the second he was clouted for five singles which netted three runs. In the third he wasn't damaged, thanks to a circus catch against the fence by Muller. In the fourth the McCloskey bunch got one more on five singles. In the fifth they got two more across the pan. The sixth and seventh were profitless but the eighth netted one, a walk, an error, a sacrifice and an out at first dainer the business. That went to last doing the business. That was the last

Trouble in the Third.

Our young men did nothing until the third. Forsythe started proceedings with a single. Essick likewise singled. Muller forced Forsythe at third, Essick Muller forced Forsythe at third, Essick taking second on the play and scoring on Clark's safe drive. Weed skied to Hammond but Hausen's long single scored Muller and Clark. This 'tied things up fon a minute. It also caused the blanketing of Mr. McFarlan, who started to pitch for Boise. Starkells, who succeeded him, was a prize for two innings. In the sixth we found the answer. After Hausen had passed away. After Hausen had passed away, Tozer, Delmas, Bruyette and Forsythe singled successively. Three runs. We got one more in the eighth on a couple got one more in the eighth on a couple of passes and a single.

At the end of the minth it was all square, as we say when we golf, or deuce, as we say when we play tennis. In other words, Boise having made as many runs as Sait Lake and Sait Lake as many runs as Soise, the score was tied. Nothing doing for Boise. Nothing doing for Boise in the eleventh. In the twelfth, with one down for Sait Lake, Muller singled and stole second as West fanned. He started on around to third on a poor throw and althe Boise players tried unsuccessfully to head him off. The result of the mix up was that the ball was thrown away and Muller scored the winning tally. Great Ten minute recess.

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE.

San Francisco, Aug. 7.—Joe Corbett made him off. The result of the mix up was that the ball was thrown away and Muller scored the winning tally. Great applause.

The Second Game.

Hostilities were renewed at 4:30. The second game was notable chiefly, nay, entirely for the slugging that was carried on. First one side was ahead, then the other. We were ahead when the game was sover. That's the main thing. Starkells was driven to the tail timber in the sixth. Our Mr. Drinkwater didn't last that long. He was led to the stable at the end of the third. In three innings Boise gathered six runs and Sait Lake seven. The feature was a one-handed catch made by Babbitt, resulting in a single-handed double, and the batting of Muller, Clark, Weed, Tozer and McClosky.

The S. L. Nationals defeated the K.-O'B. Browns at Calder's park by the score of 12 to 9. The game was very interesting up to the eighth. The score stood 4 to 1 till the fifth, in favor of the Browns. Then till the eighth it stood 6 to 4 in favor of the Nationals. Then both sides piled up many runs on errors. The Nationals took the $50 purse.

The Most Effective Holds and How They Are Executed.

Not many years ago wrestling was one of the favorite athletic sports. It made up a part of all great tourneys, and, no matter where it might be man met man in these bouts of physical ardor. But the styles of wrestling were different; like dialects, they varied according to locality. Then, as time passed, the old champions retired, the younger generation did not rise to the occasion and as a result stagnation set in.

For a long period no revival seemed imminent. The pastime dropped further and further back, and it was not until a short time ago that wrestling was again taken up. It has not been a great sport in America for a long time. The revival in England has been more pronounced. The great paying public may not know that it was due to a British born wrestler, in the person of Jack Carkeek, that the sport was again brought to the fore in his native land. Such was the case. Carkeek, born in Cornwall, but living in the mining camps of America from an early age, wasted a year of his life in trying to make managers see matters through his glasses and, undeterred by early fallures, at length carried his point.

Next! came Georges Hackenschmidt. When the Russlan first landed in England he was a Greco-Roman wrestler pure and simple; but this was a style in which Englishmen certainly had not shone of late, their lack of weight being detrimental to their success. Nor did the public take kindly to the Greco-Roman system. Puerile exhibitions on the part of foreigners had killed their interest in this particular style.

The Russian, however, was not deterred and, placing himself in the hands of Ferdinand Grubn, the examateur headstern the system of the more popular style. To the displays of Carkeek and Hackerschmidt, to those of Gruhn, undoubtedly the best off teachers, and of Joe Carroll must be ascribed the revival. If it may be called such on both sides of the Atlantic. But it is largely professional wrestling that now is followed.

Double Shoulder Throw.

To effect the double shoulder throw one man gets an opponent's arm over his shoulder, and, bending forward, the successful wrestler lifts him off his feet by main force. Gripping his leg as he comes up, and throwing the body forward, the man so lifted drops flat. By a quick twist he occasionally saves himself, but as a rule the force of the impact gains the fall.
